National Conference on "FUTURE HIGHER EDUCATION POLICY OF INDIA : VISION AND DIMENSIONS"

underdeveloped countries is responsible for their inability to absorb capital in productive investment. Thus, attention has shifted from capital to education, from investment in material capital to investment in human capital. In order to meet the challenges of the 21st century and to acquire a competitive edge, the higher education system of India has to transform to make it more socially relevant, technology oriented, diversified and of high quality. The skills and specialization of graduates produced by our system should match the real needs of the productive sector in the market place and the changing needs of our society. In view of the crucial contribution of education, especially higher education to growth and development it becomes all the more relevant to examine how much and in what direction growth in higher education has taken place and whether the growth has been commensurate to the needs of the economy. The central government incurs a large expenditure on higher education by financing central universities and centrally governed institutions of higher learning, as well as some development expenditures of state universities and colleges. However the greater part of expenditure on higher education in the states is incurred by the respective governments or the institutions themselves. States are perpetually short of funds and this has adversely impacted not just the development but even routine functioning of state universities and colleges. Self-financing by colleges and even universities is being resorted to for expansion of the higher education sector. There is realization that quality is being compromised for quantity. These issues have assumed relevance in the present scenario of our higher education system. Hence, there is need to study the trends in growth and financing of higher education

Educate a man you educate an individual. Educate a woman and you educate a family. A. Cripps Indian higher education system is one of the largest in the world. It consists of colleges, universities, institutions and autonomous institutions with the status of deemed universities. In case of girls, the choices of courses is not dependent on girl's academic achievements, parents take the decision for them. This decision is generally guided by the consideration that girls are not expected to work or earn before and after marriage. The poor parents have another problem even though they perceive the significance of education, many a times they are not able to finance it. Due to social and economic reasons, parents may be unwilling to spend on education as well as the dowries of their daughters.

In social structure, parents are not expected to use the income of their daughters. Therefore, even educated daughters are not encouraged to work and if they do so, it is for a short period before marriage. After marriage it is the right of the groom's family to decide whether she will work or not. Therefore, for a majority of young women in the academia, higher education is not linked to careers.

Conclusions

Results of this study provide evidence supporting the effectiveness of ashtang yoga training in body composition. It means and concludes that practice of ashtang yoga enhances the body composition of young adults.

Threat with "Throwaway Plastics"

Dr. Rajeev Kumar Yadav

ABSTRACT

Plastic is everywhere in our surroundings. In everyday life of human being, the use of plastic is unavoidable. It is such a popular material because of its flexibility, lightweight and moisture resistant character. Due to its lightweight, durability, chemically resistant, non-reactive to outside influences and easy to manufacture, plastic has a perfect building material for countless articles that are used not only by ordinary users in their daily affairs but also in aeronautics, construction industry, electronics, packaging, transportation, energy conservation, scientific components and other but there is a threat with "throwaway plastics" i.e. disposable plastics, single use products, kick-off items etc. It is known that discarded plastic's pose a threat to human health and environment due to its non-biodegradable nature. Littering of plastics causes irreversible damage to the environment. Plastic wastes hinder the natural aeration process of the surface water bodies and choke municipal sewer lines. Consuming food wrapped in colored plastic has adverse effects on health. Municipalities routinely receive reports of death of cows and other animals from ingesting plastic bags.

Environmental art is a range of artistic practices encompassing both historical approaches to nature in art and more recent ecological and politically motivated types of works. Environmental art has evolved away from formal concerns, worked out with earth as a sculptural material, towards a deeper relationship to systems, processes and phenomena in relationship to social concerns. Integrated social and ecological approaches developed as an ethical, restorative stance emerged in the 1990s. The earliest rock carvings in India were discovered by Archibald Cadley, twelve years before the Cave of Altamira in Spain, although his work only came to light much later via J Cockburn (1899). Dr. V. S. Wakankar discovered several painted rock shelters in Central India, situated around the Vindhya mountain

Deforestation

*"Wildlife is Mother Nature's greatest treasure,
To protect it, we must take every measure."*

Deforestation, clearance, clearcutting or clearing is the removal of a forest or stand of trees from land which is then converted to a non-forest use. Deforestation can involve conversion of forest land to farms, ranches, or urban use. The most concentrated deforestation occurs in tropical rainforests. About 31% of Earth's land surface is covered by forests. The removal of trees without sufficient reforestation has resulted in habitat damage, biodiversity loss, and aridity. Deforestation causes extinction, changes to climatic conditions, desertification, and displacement of populations, as observed by current conditions and in the past through the fossil record. Deforestation also has adverse impacts on biosequestration of atmospheric carbon dioxide, increasing negative feedback cycles contributing to global warming. Global warming also puts increased pressure on communities who seek food security by clearing forests for agricultural use and reducing arable land more generally. Deforested regions typically incur significant other environmental effects such as adverse soil erosion and degradation into wasteland.

Causes of Deforestation:

Natural causes as hurricanes, fires, parasites and floods are the natural causes for the deforestation

Human activities as agricultural expansion, cattle breeding, timber extraction, mining, oil extraction, dam construction and infrastructure development.

- Insufficient political actions and governance failure as inadequate land tenure system, corruption, wrong public administration investments
- Political and socio-economic causes as population growth, military conflicts and climatic changes

Logging Illegal logging activities are very common that destroy the livelihoods of the people depending on forests. Wood-based industries like paper, match-sticks, furniture need a substantial amount of wood supply. Wood is used as fuel most commonly and so large amount of trees are cut down for fuel supplies. Firewood and charcoal are used as fuel.

Agricultural Activities The conversion of forests into agricultural land is a big reason for deforestation. Due to overgrowing demand for food products, many trees are chopped down for crops and for cattle grazing. Over 40% of the forests are cleared to obtain land and meet the needs of agriculture and wood.

Radiation Dose Due to Exposure to Natural Radioactive Gases

divyanshu.singh2009@gmail.com

Introduction

Henri Becquerel, in 1896 discovered the phenomenon of radioactivity, though Marie Curie was the first to coin the word "radioactivity". Both Becquerel's and Curie's work was greatly assisted by an earlier scientific breakthrough when in 1895 Wilhelm Roentgen discovered X-rays. Both radioactivity and the ionising radiation associated with it have existed on earth long before life emerged. Indeed, they were present in space before the earth itself appeared. Radioactive materials became part of the earth at its very formation. There is radioactivity in the air we breathe, the food we eat and the house we live in. Even man himself is slightly radioactive since all living tissues contain traces of radioactive substances. Most of the radiation dose we receive is from naturally occurring sources—most of this is from

ABSTRACTS

Climate change caused by the global increase in temperatures triggers multiple negative effects on the planet. These effects interrelate with each other and increase their violence putting at the risk the species that inhabit the earth, including the humans. The global increase in temperatures can influence the physical, biological and human systems.

One of the most serious impacts of climate change is how it will affect water resources around the world. Water is intimately tied to other resource and social issues such as food supply, health, industry, transportation and ecosystem, integrity. These days a number of species e.g. vulnerability at the verge of extinction. The extinction of species is correlated with global warming. It shows that increase and decrease in the percentage of carbon dioxide, rise and fall of global temperatures, retreat and advancement of glaciers, extinction and modification of fauna and flora (Dry and humid cold and warm climate stages) or natural cycles. Therefore all the global climatic and environmental changes are natural, not anthropogenic.

Climate change has significant implications for our health. Rising temperatures will likely lead to increased air pollution, a longer and more intense allergy season the spread of insect born disease, more frequent and dangerous heat waves and heavier rainstorms and flooding. All of these changes pose serious and costly risks to public health.

Keywords: Climate change, global warming, greenhouse effects, aerosols.

Introduction

Climate is a variable that influence all population and community processes because the distribution and abundance of all organisms is affected by climate. During your lifetime these impacts of climate change will lead to the most significant problem facing the globe. Climate change involves a complex set of changes because not all areas are warming when global temperatures are increasing, and not all areas are having greater precipitation when on average global precipitation is increasing. Greenhouse gases represent one of the components that affect global warming.

Global warming and climate change are often used interchangeably. But more accurately, global warming is the mainly human-caused increase in global surface temperatures and its projected continuation and its affects, such as changes in precipitation. The major greenhouse gases are water vapor, which causes about 36% - 70% of greenhouse effect on the earth (not including clouds); carbon dioxide, which causes 9% - 26% of greenhouse effect; methane, which causes 4% - 9% and ozone, which causes 3% - 7% other greenhouse gases include nitrous oxide, sulfurhexafluoride, hydro fluorocarbons, perfluoro carbons and chlorofluro-carbons (Solomon et al. 2007). Climate change is here and its causing a wide range of impacts that will affect virtually every human on earth in increasingly

Introduction

The concept of the environment is as old as nature's very concept. It is a composite term referring to conditions where all living and non-living beings, including plant life, thrive and become living sources of life for organisms consisting of air, water, food, sunlight, etc. The concept also includes temperature, wind, and velocity of the atmosphere.

Environmental Pollution

It is equally necessary to know what "pollution" is before understanding what "environmental pollution" is.

Pollution:

The Royal Environmental Pollution Commission in the UK. In its third report, the term "Pollution" was defined as follows:

the introduction by human beings of substances or energy susceptible to harm to human health, harm to living resources and ecological systems, damage to structures or amenities, or interference with legitimate environmental uses.

According to UK Environment Protection Act, the term "Pollution means: The release (into any environment medium) of any cycle of substances that can cause harm to man or any other environmentally protected living organisms.

Pollution happens when the potential for harm is present. Man's harm is not limited to physical injury, but involves offense caused to any of his senses or damage to his properties, therefore smells and noise that I may not because injury can be pollution. Harm to living organisms may include harm to their health or conflict with the ecological systems.

Types of Pollution

In general, environmental pollution can be classified as: (1) natural pollution; (2) man-made pollution.

- 1. Natural Pollution: Natural phenomena such as earthquakes, floods, drought, cyclones, etc. often pollute the environment.
- 2. Man-made Pollution: Human activities: It is also possible to define environmental pollution as air pollution, water pollution, soil pollution, food pollution, noise pollution and nuclear emissions, etc.

could be justified solely on such an assessment. In practice, the evolution of ES is based on professional experience and on good knowledge of the application area and its environmental context.

Conclusion

The legal and procedural background to EIA is complex but members of the public can be surprisingly effective in participating in the process if they ignore the jargon, have a basic understanding of the process and apply their local knowledge effectively.

Things to look out for a phrases such as desktop survey which is shorthand for nobody have time to look at the site. The quality of ES can be surprisingly poor with developers often keen to do the least possible to get the application through so it is vital local people go on asking critical questions of the applicant and local authority planners. In the future EIA is likely to be applied to ever more forms of development. New measures will soon ensure the strategic environmental assessment of planning policy and investment programmes. EIA can be made into a useful tool to defend the environmental quality of localities but only if local people feel able to engage with the process effectively.

Indoor Plants—Air Purifying Plants

Introduction

Indoor plants are an ideal way to create attractive and restful settings while enhancing our sense of well being. In addition, indoor plants may be hobby and also help in purify air in our homes. Indoor plants not only convert carbon dioxide to oxygen, but they also trap and absorb many pollutants. Many chemical compounds, which are released into air, come from everyday items present in our homes and offices. Indoor plants cultivation differ from growing outdoor plants and interior environment also affects plant growth. Plant growth is affected by light, temperature, humidity, water, nutrition and soil. All of these factors affect growth of interior plant; out of these adequate light is the most important. Some important indoor plants are Abutilon hybridum, Acalypha hispida, Adiantum, Agave, Alcornoque, Amarantus compositus, Anthurium, Aracaria, Asparagus, Begonia, Bougainvillea, Caladium, Cathartanthus roseus, Chrysanthemum,

Introduction

Wetlands are areas of land where the water level remains near or above. The surface of the ground for most of the year. The Association of humans and wetlands in ancient with the first signs of civilization originating in the wetlands heritage such as Flood Plains of the Indus the Nile delta and fertile crescent of the tigris and Euphrates rivers. Wetlands covers about 8% of the earth land surface. These are several kinds of wetlands such as Marsh, swamp, bog and fen (bog and fens being types of mires) some experts also recognize wet meadows and aquatic ecosystems as additional wetland types. The Largest wetlands in the world include the swamp forest of the Amazon and the Peatlands of Siberia.

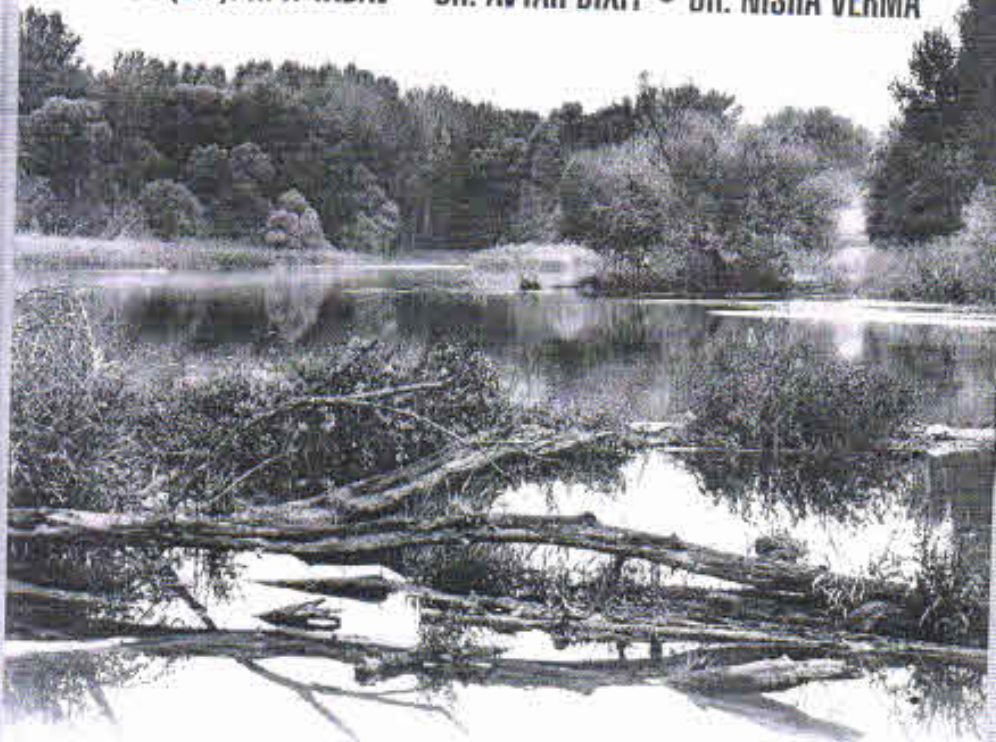

These are some of the richest most diverse and fragile Natural resources. As they support a variety of plant and
